AMERICAN TYPE FACES

"FASHIONABLE STYLES OF RUGGED TYPE FACES"

is the title of a pamphlet published by the American Type Founders Company which is a valuable piece of literature. It shows to advantage how effectively their recent face known as the Roycroft can be used in different ways. This face works up better with Colonial subjects than any we have yet seen. Their letter known as the Pynson Oldstyle Italic is also one that could be put to good service by the advertiser. The only way to fully appreciate the value of the faces above mentioned is to send for a copy of this pamphlet, and notice how attractively the "American" has worked them up. The style of composition shown could also be studied to advantage by the advertiser. The advertising departments can not get hold of too much literature on the subject of Type Faces, especially from a foundry that is continually producing new faces. An advertisement in the papers or general magazines set in a type face with distinctive characteristics is bound to catch the eye so accustomed to the general line of plain type faces that are still being more or less used. We hardly think that the value of a new face in an advertisement is fully appreciated by the average advertiser."—ADVERTISING EXPERIENCE.

PREFACE.

THE CHICAGO CITY DIRECTORY for 1902 contains 625,500 names, an increase of 18,800 names over the preceding year. In making a comparative estimate of the present population of Chicago, a difficulty is at once presented by the fact that a computation based on the United States census of 1890 yields results differing enormously from computations based upon the census of 1900, in spite of the fact that identical arithmetical methods of computation are used in each instance, and should yield identical results unless one of those two censuses is radically incorrect.

The publishers do not make use of the ordinary and inexact multiple method of estimating population, but utilize the ratio of directory names in a census year to the population, computed by the United States Census Bureau, as the first member of an arithmetical proportion from which the population in any given year may be determined after the number of names in the directory has been ascertained. The ratio being constant and the method uniform, the result should coincide with the figures of a new census—if that census is itself correct. The school census, the vote in presidential years, and our own estimate have invariably been in harmony.

Two years ago the Directory estimated the population of Chicago as approximately 2,010,000. Shortly afterwards the school census, which had been taken with unusual care (for the reason that comparison was to be made for the first time in ten years with the United States census), was independently announced as 2,007,000. The population announced by the Census Bureau was 1,698,575. Was this census too small, or that of 1890 enormously too large? All the evidence tends to show the former alternative is correct. The unsatisfactory methods used in taking the census, the blunders made elsewhere in 1900, (as in the neighboring city of Evanston where 1,126 persons were missed by the census-takers out of a total of 20,344), demonstrate that no credence can be placed on a census which is radically out of harmony with every other computation derived from any source whatsoever.

Computed upon the basis of the government census of 1890, the present population of Chicago is 2,144,000. To question these figures is to assume that an incredible number of fictitious persons were added to that earlier census—a proposition which seems by its absurdity to refute itself. An estimate based in the same manner upon the ratio of directory names in 1900, (584,000), to the population announced by the government in that year, would show a present population of 1,820,000. The publishers have brought to the solution of this problem the experience of years, a long familiarity with the work, an intimate knowledge of the field, a trained and tested staff. They have no hesitation in stating that the Chicago census of 1900 was a farce; that no computation based upon its figures can even approximate the truth, and that Chicago's population to-day is, in round numbers, 2,144,000.

STREET AND AVENUE GUIDE.

EXPLANATORY.

The City comprises Ten Divisions, known as the North, South and West Divisions, Hyde Park, Lake, Calumet, Lake View, Jefferson, Austin and Rogers Park.

Streets that cross the Chicago River have the prefix N. north of the River, and W. west of the River, but the prefix E. or S. is (with two or three exceptions) never used. Thus, the correct names are Erie and W. Erie, Lake and W. Lake, Clark and N. Clark, State and N. State, etc.

All east and west streets south of 39th have the prefix W. west of State. Thus, 47th and W. 47th, instead of 47th (H.P.) and 47th (L.), as formerly.

All east and west streets north of Nelson have the prefix W. west of N. Western av. Thus, Lawrence av. and W. Lawrence av. instead of Lawrence av. (L.V.) and Lawrence av. (J.), as formerly.

In the West Division, all streets that cross W. Randolph have the prefix N. or S. Thus, N. Ada, north of Randolph, and S. Ada, south of Randolph. West of Union Park (where W. Randolph ends) W. Lake street is the dividing line.

On any street, the relative location of a house is got by running down the column of figures, which are its numbers at the several crossings of the streets that intersect it. The right hand number after crossing is usually given. For example, to find 44 State, it will be seen that 30 is on the corner of Lake, and 66 is on the corner of Randolph; hence 44 is between these two streets. Where no numbers are given, the corners, and often the blocks, are vacant.
